

Pronouns and Antecedents

You always want to write so your readers clearly understand what it is you're trying to say. You also must make sure that the antecedent of a pronoun (the word the pronoun refers to) is clear in your writing. (For more information, see 758.1 in Texas Write Source.)

Example

Unclear Pronoun Use:

I took my car to the corner gas station because it was nearly empty.

(This sentence does not clearly state what was nearly empty—the car or the gas station—because the antecedent of the pronoun “it” is unclear.)

Clear Pronoun and Antecedent:

Because my car was nearly empty, I took it to the corner gas station.

(“Car” is definitely the antecedent of the pronoun “it” in this sentence.)

Directions

Rewrite each of the following sentences so that the pronoun has a clearly stated antecedent. Be sure to use the boldfaced pronoun in your new sentence. The first sentence has been done for you.

- Reggie sat in the first row of the theater since it was empty.

Since the first row of the theater was empty, Reggie sat in it.

- When I put my foot into the shoe, it was wet.

- When the ice floe reached the old dam, it broke.

4. After he'd left the present on the doorstep, Gerard realized it was the wrong one.

5. Though the chauffeur drove the limousine into the fence, it wasn't damaged.

6. I can't give the bone to my dog because it is too sharp.

7. I don't go to movies with my young cousins because they are too violent.
(they becomes them)

8. Traffic, on the way to my aunt's dinner, which was terrible, made us late.

Next Step Turn to page 766 in Texas Write Source to find a chart of singular and plural personal pronouns. Write at least three sentences that use a pronoun with its antecedent. Draw an arrow from the pronoun to its antecedent.
